Explain:

5 Please state your reason for applying for a temporary lifting of an entry ban or to enter Norway for a short visit

One condition for lifting an entry ban is that the applicant's situation has changed significantly since the time of the expulsion. Such a significant change must be due to circumstances beyond the influence or control of the applicant.

If you had children in Norway at the time of your expulsion, their interests were taken into consideration when the expulsion decision was made. The fact that the child is still resident in Norway, and that you do not have visitation, is not in itself a factor warranting that the entry ban should be lifted. The fact that you have had a child in Norway after you were expelled is also not in itself a factor warranting that the entry ban should be lifted.

For UDI to lift the entry ban, the child must have developed significant health problems or serious problems related to their day-to-day care after the expulsion decision was made.

UDI points out that children have the right to be heard in matters that concern them. Children's views may be heard whether they are expressed in writing or orally. It is up to the parents to decide how the child should be involved.

State which changes constitute the grounds for your application. Use a separate sheet if you need more space. You must provide documentation to support this information.
